

A METHOD FOR MODELING DISCONTINUITIES IN A MICROWAVE COAXIAL TRANSMISSION LINE

Tom Y. Otoshi

Jet Propulsion Laboratory
California Institute of Technology
Pasadena, CA 91109

ABSTRACT

A methodology for modeling discontinuities in a coaxial transmission line is presented. The method uses a non-linear least squares fit program to optimize the fit between a theoretical model and experimental data. When the method was applied for modeling discontinuities in a damaged S-band antenna cable, excellent agreement was obtained.